SONS HENRY AND SONS JOHN

Elaine (Reno) Watson, Ann Arbor, Michigan

When Henry John Renau came to Washtenaw County from Schale, Germany, in 1843, he left behind four brothers, all with names of either "Henry" or "John."

According to Schale church records, Henry John's father, Gerd Renau, was confirmed in 1792. In those days it was part of an area that changed allegiance several times between France and the developing nation of Germany.

In 1811 Gerd married Anna Christina Elizabeth Meckstroth. When Gerd died, some time before 1822, he and Anna had had five sons, all named "Henry, ." and two named "John": Henry John, Lambert Henry, Lewis Henry, Gerd Henry, and John Henry. In 1822 "the widow Elizabeth Renau" married Gerhard Henrich Kroener.

In the mid-1840s Henry John Renau and Lambert Henry Renau, with their families and their mother Elizabeth Kroener, came to America. Henry J. and his family settled in Sharon Township, and the Lambert Renau family bought farm land in Freedom Township. My grandfather John was Lambert's first child born in America, his older brother Henry having been born in Schale. An older sister came into the world during the passage across the ocean.

Lambert's oldest sons--Henry and John--worked for a while for an Uncle Kroener, who had a lumber mill near Bay City, so apparently Elizabeth (Renau) Kroener brought relatives from her second marriage to this country, too. However, she lived with one or another of her local children until her death in 1864. Elizabeth was buried in the Evangelical Cemetery on Lima Center Road in Freedom, as "Elizabeth Kroener." Her obituary in Der Christliche Botschafter for February 1864 reads "survived by five children."

And the new generation in America continued to name their baby boys "Henry" and "John." (My grandfather John named his only son--my father--"William John.") J. Henry--Gerd and Elizabeth's younger son--named sons "John" and "Henry."

As my father--William John, grandson of Lambert John--told it, the post office had problems with identifying just which letters, bills and church publications should go to which "Henry Renau" or "John Renau."

Over the years both Henry and John--oldest grandsons of Gerd--changed the spelling of their name to the phonetic form:Reno. The J. Henry family kept the original spelling. And although Henry had four daughters (no problem for the post office) and John also had four daughters--and one son, my father William John--the John Henry Renau family named two of their sons "John" and "Henry.'

At one time in the late nineteenth century the Census found seventeen people in Freedom Township named "Reno" or Renau." Now there are none. My father's sister named her son

"Reno"--a reminder of this clan of settlers on farms in Washtenaw County long ago. And there is "Reno Road," running along the west end of Pleasant Lake, a road named after my father--township clerk in Freedom for many years--and for my grandfather, John Reno, who purchased the farm at the west end of the lake shortly after his marriage in 1878. On that farm he and Fredericka Koebbe ("Ricky Reno") reared their four daughters and one son--my father William John. And I had no brothers.

Anson Brown kept the postoffice and a dry goods store, employing Mr. McCollum as book-keeper in the year 1833. Mr. McCollum is still living and remarkably active and industrious for his age, having passed his 83 year. He has raised a large family.

Dr. Cowles was the first physician located in Ann Arbor. He officiated in nearly every family, and was regarded with great favor by all who knew him. His widow is still living. The first child that he introduced upon this stage of action was Mrs. Crowel, third daughter of Mr. Jones, in 1844. The Washtenaw hotel was built in 1832, and was said to be the best hotel between Detroit and Jackson. W. R. Thompson was proprietor. Having some idea of going into the mercantile business, he (Jones) thought of buying out a store in upper town. An invoice taken revealed, "half a barrel of whisky, with a nail on the side holding a tin cup, three open-top thimbles, five darning needles and a hank of black linen thread." Mr. J. concluded that the stock was too heavy and he turned his attention to coopering.

In the year 1840 the first train of cars came to Ann Arbor. It was an occasion of much rejoicing. Mr. Thomas Holmes, who kept a select school in the old Baptist Church, dismissed his school for half a holiday. We marched with our teacher in good order to the residence of Dr. Ormsby, on the hill just north of the grist mill and now occupied by Eli Moore, to await its coming. When at length it appeared, laden with excursionists, our joy knew no bounds. A grand jubilee followed, long to be remembered by all who participated. And the question has often presented itself to our minds since, "Why he did not take us to the station, if he wanted to give us a treat, instead of to a hill a quarter mile away!" Mr. Holmes was a good teacher, and many of his scholars, now parents and grandparents, remember his school with pleasure.

In the spring of 1845 an accident occurred which is worthy of note in this little sketch — the breaking of the bridge on the Huron. It happened on Sunday. There were to be several people baptised by immersion in the river, and the bridge was just about thronged with spectators of the scene. While in the middle of the solemn ceremony the bridge suddenly gave way, precipitating several hundred people, men, women and children, into the rushing stream. Such screaming, shouts and confusion followed as was truly appalling. Hats, bonnets, parasols, etc. wet (sic) floating away with the water. What seemed a matter of great wonderment was the fact that of all the people thrown in such a mass, with the debris and the broken bridge, not one was killed and none seriously injured, beyond a thorough ducking and the damage done to clothing. Of course this unlooked for episode ended the exercises of the day in short order. D.T. McCollum, Jas. Jones and many others who were on terra firma, and thus escaped, did much in rescuing and caring for half-drowned humanity.

There have been several newspaper publications in the lower town. The "Signal of Liberty," an anti-slavery organ, was published by the Rev. Guy Beckley and a Mr. Foster, on the east side of Broadway. At an office or offices on the other side we had "The Gem of Science," published by Sanford & Sanford, also a weekly; "The Primitive Expounder," a semi-monthly by Thornton and Billings, two Universalist ministers; "The Alphadelphi Tocsin," published in the interest of the Alphadelphian Association, located in Kalamazoo. Besides these there was "The Native American," a political paper; the "Young Yankee," devoted to light reading and amusement; "The Corrector," instituted to make crooked people walk straight, an organ much needed even at the present day. The last named, however, were short lived and expired after an ephemeral existence of a few months.

There was a large paper mill erected by a Mr. Jones and Mr. Foley, and successfully run by them for a few years. It then became the property of Norman Chapin, who conducted it on a small scale for some years; finally it was consumed by fire in 1866, and the Agricultural Works, by Moore and Son, erected on its site, where they now stand, owned and controlled by Messrs. Moore, Finnegan and Howard. They also erected the fine large square house now occupied by Dr. Kellogg, a clairvoyant physician of considerable note, as a boarding house for the employees, but these failed after a time, and for years the old mill stood still.

In the course of time the city proper having been located in upper town – improvements having gone on rapidly – while the lower town was admitted sometime after the rest of Ann Arbor became a city, progressed very slowly.

During the war of the Rebellion a large percentage of the male population joined in the ranks and went to fight for the Union. Seventy-five old and young men went from this ward alone; fighting valiantly in the cause of freedom they left a glorious record behind them — not one having proved recreant to his trust. Some of these brave men came through this terrible ordeal unscathed. A few of those who fell were brought home and interred here; the greatest number, stricken upon the battlefield, or languished and died in hospitals we know not where. The patriotic people of this ward have erected a monument to their memory, and a society of ladies has been organized for the purpose of keeping their memories green in the hearts of a grateful people. This society is known as the Fifth Ward Ladies Decoration Society. They number about twenty members and have a President, Vice-President, Treasurer and Secretary. They hold semi-monthly meetings and elect officers yearly; give socials, parties, lectures and various entertainments to keep up the interest and supply the treasury with means to pay the expenses of Memorial Day, which is observed with much ceremony, and is an occasion of deep feeling and gratitude toward the noble dead. Usually a large number of people join in the solemn exercises, such as speaking, singing, music, and the scattering of flowers. Children bear an important part, to impress upon the young heart a true spirit of patriotism.

Many of the old pioneers of this section of Washtenaw County have passed away. A few yet remain. Among those who have closed their record of earthly events I will mention a few well-known in this section: John Monroe and his wife Electa Monroe, my parents; Col. White and wife; Mrs. Foster; Mr. Glazier; Mr. And Mrs. Hicks; Mr. And Mrs. Dwight Kellogg; Day Belding; Laban Felch, who gave two of his sons a sacrifice upon the alter of liberty; Mr. Greenman who was blown up in his match factory six months before his death, which was caused by the accident; Dr. Cowles; Solomon Doty; Chet Ingals; Nell Benham; Nate Burnam; T.A. Haviland, for many years a blacksmith and machinist; Chas. Vail; J. H. Lund, formerly a merchant; Bill Sinclair, for many years owner of the large flouring mills; Dr. Irish; Rial B. Chase; Mr. Matthews, Mr. Powel; Mr. And Mrs. Wait; Dr. Kellogg; the Misses Vail who taught school in the residence on Broadway when we who are grandmothers were little children, so time moves on bearing all in its restless course.

In 1874 there was an explosion in this quiet section, which for a time filled the inhabitants with consternation. It occurred in the store of A. Herz, and was occasioned by a fire, which exploded a keg of gunpowder. The heavy walls of masonry were torn and rent from cellar to garret, and although twenty persons were injured, none were killed and only one dangerously injured. While the great heart of the world throbs on in the rush and flow of events scarcely a ripple of commotion reaches our quiet corner. But the advent of a new Railroad is now looked forward to with much interest in the hope of its providing an impetus to the spirit of improvement. The people are generally united, intelligent, industrious, and while we have none very wealthy or very poor, all are law-abiding and happy.
